SIK (Space Invader Kreature) is an FPS, arcade-style, shoot-'em-up top-of-the-line visuals and intense gun combat with some RPG elements including upgrading things like health, speed, shields, and more. Some aspects of the game look retro, others more like modern video game graphics, but either way it looks nice. The game starts out in a mediary level, in a clearing, the only thing in the clearing is a power tower, but nothing else of interest. The enemies are Space Invaders, they come in waves, with the first wave being a set of seven or so, but of the second and third waves they can be anywhere from two to seven or more. The first wave you see will be gone by the time the second wave comes, the second wave will be gone by the time the third wave comes. The third wave you will see will be gone when the fourth wave comes. You can rotate the camera left and right by pressing the left and right buttons, the camera can be zoomed in by using the button in the middle of the D-pad and the camera can be zoomed out by using the button in the middle of the X-button. There are other things in the levels you can zoom in and out of, including the camera, the enemy's base, and the power tower, some of these things also rotate, so if you're on the enemy's base you can see what's on the tower's other side. The enemies vary, they can vary from being a small pack of two or three, to a large pack of five or six, to a pack of eight or more. While there are a set of waves of enemy invaders, each wave will have things you can do to try to kill them, these things are things like speed boosts, change the direction of fire, different types of melee attacks, and more. The types of things that make the attacks stronger is based on how much you have upgraded them. The more you upgrade something the more power you will get from it, the more upgrades you get the more powerful the attack will be. Right now there are four upgradable things, speed, health, shields, and firing power. Speed is the only thing that isn't upgradable, but you can increase your speed by running. Health and shields are upgradable, if you have good health you can use some powers that regenerate health and shield power. If you have enough health you can use

THIRD VIGIL, SIX DAYS from THIRD WATCH Solve Time's Quandary with Marvin Gardens on GAMES of ANIMAL ODYSSEUS®! 🏹🐼🏹 The Vigils' Quandary "I thought that the Lion was the judge of time." What does Time think she's playing with? Last night you gave the sparrow its honor. Then you turned time to Adlewise. And more. But how can this be? Time sits, terrified. Will the Cat not come at dawn? Will dew fall from the Vine, be replaced with honey? Supposing that the Lion might honour the sparrow and then none, the Vine and then none? Suppose the morning greets our quiet with a tumbling flower? ♦♦♦ There are many windows on Time. Some open to morning. Others to dusk. Some to night. Others to dawn. You? In the Garden of Eros, known as the Vicar's Meadow, a lovely place of flowers, saplings and shrubs. In the Garden of Los, to the east, open to night. In the Garden of Fate, to the west, open to moments when the Key of Time is turned. So it has already happened? Is there a flower tumbling? And Time, with her gilded hair, stays with roses, vines and the here and now, swooning, sobbing out a time of peace. THE SECRET, and it is not obvious or easy to find, why we should question Time's ruling, is that she has delivered into our custody the lives of the world, animals included. "Doesn't it seem that way?" said Scholar F'gap. Kept in some box or other until such days as we consider. But the stories of mankind are also one's own. The stories we remember, that is. The stories written in the Library? These, we have of course only our own tale, the tale that each of us made for oneself. There is no room for secrets in a book, not even a secret person being written in a book. It is not so for the secret person.

This person we wish to write about
